

Amnesty International USA presents a

DEATH PENALTY PHOTO EXHIBIT

an educational, eye opening,
and original documentary project
available for exhibit at schools,
universities, places of worship,
libraries and more.

*"... extraordinarily compelling...
a moving exhibit."*

~ Kerry Maloney, Harvard University Chaplain

"... such an important element of the death penalty debate."

~ David Legore, Dept. Chair of Dramatic Media, Texas Lutheran University

WHAT IS THE PROJECT? A long term photo documentary project on the death penalty that includes execution vigils, inside an execution chamber, the hours leading up to an execution (including that of Troy Davis), portraits of exonerated death row prisoners, celebrities opposed to the death penalty, marches, demonstrations and candid emotional and prayerful moments in the context of the death penalty in the United States.

WHAT YOU CAN DO: Amnesty International is looking for groups, organizations and venues to host an exhibit of the photos to educate others about the reality of the death penalty. Several exhibit options of various sizes and styles are printed and ready to display. Specific content can be adjusted according to location, space limitations, and audience. All photos are by photojournalist and Amnesty death penalty abolition activist Scott Langley, who is also available to present photos in person or attend openings or events.
